BACKGROUND:

Michel Trac trained in graphic arts, particularly screen printing, drawing and Indian ink, with renowned artists Jean-Pierre Gonthier, Luc d'Haegheleer and Yves Barla.

WORK:

In this series of paintings entitled 'Masterpieces', the artist draws inspiration from his numerous visits to international contemporary art exhibitions and fairs. Michel Trac retains only the traces and contours of these masterpieces of art history, exaggerating their contrasts and projecting them onto his canvas. He then meticulously reproduces them in black ink, thus penetrating the intimacy of these modern icons. The orange frame is reminiscent of the characteristic colour of property advertisements in Belgium. This series of paintings deals with the concept of the uniqueness of a work of art, the value that this character confers on it and the trade that results from it. There will only ever be one Mona Lisa (La Joconde) by Michel Trac. Naturally curious about what is happening in the world, Michel Trac uses writing as well as painting to convey his vision of things. He has already written several plays. You can also follow him on Instagram: TRACMICHEL
