ART AND WORK

This is how Denis Blondel describes his work:

"Landscapes created using mixed media (collages and various mediums) that border on abstraction. A few lines, simple colours... People are absent, though their presence can be sensed (traces of ploughing in one corner); the skies are often heavy, a sense of menace hangs in the air, yet light is ever-present. My landscapes are calm, silent.

Rather than vast, grandiose landscapes, I paint the small copses one sees by the roadside between two fields – fragile remnants of the forests of yesteryear, like scraps of wallpaper left on the walls...

I'd like people to imagine that children have built a treehouse in these copses, that a tractor is passing by, that the soil is rich and that life is peaceful... or could be."
